

Leith Theatre, Ferry Road, Edinburgh.

BUILDING HISTORY

Leith Theatre is located at the junction of Ferry Road and North Junction Street. Built as part of a civic complex comprising the library, theatre and a small assembly hall to commemorate the incorporation of Leith into the City of Edinburgh. The now Category B-listed complex is a rare and beautiful example of a classical Art Deco style. The large theatre has been unused since the 1980s.

Vision:

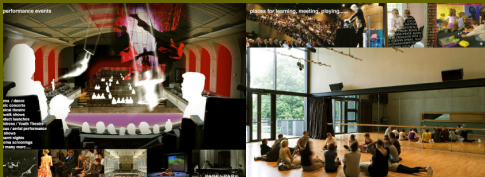

To deliver a vibrant performance and visual arts centre within the heart of Leith, presenting contemporary and community arts and culture of the highest quality.

WHAT'S HAPPENING NOW?

Leith Theatre has the potential to provide a vibrant cultural centre for performance and the visual arts within the heart of Leith.

The Cockburn Conservation Trust and the Leith Theatre Trust are working together to carry out an Options Appraisal, considering the existing condition of the building and it's potential for re-use, together with it's future management and cultural programme. Together they have developed an ambitious vision for the sustainable future use of Leith Theatre.
